

Talk 10: Our Ancestors 1939 - 1945

by Robert Parker, Genealogist

Many people have fathers and grandfathers (and sometimes mothers and grandmothers) who fought in the second world war.

The second world war is becoming an increasingly important area of study.

- Many records are closed for data protection, or are they?
- Many records are only accessible with a charge, or are they?
- What sources are available for tracking our ancestors at this crucially important time of their lives and how can you access them?

Records are available online, many for a fee. What websites should you explore?
